JAPANESE GROUND FORCES ATTEMPT TO WEAR DOWN ALREADY FATIGUED MARINES ON GUADALCANAL; NIP "JAP" SPEARHEADS

Obvious That American Troops Cannot Hold Off Attacks Indefinitely, Unless Supplies and Reinforcements Are Gotten Through

By Joseph A. Bors
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Attacking in relays, Japanese ground forces on Guadalcanal today were attempting to wear down already fatigued U. S. Marines and army troops who, nevertheless, have nipped off two enemy spearheads that succeeded in puncturing U. S. lines around the airfield.

Latest front line reports indicated that the Nipponese on Guadalcanal were using the same tactics employed on Bataan—where they attacked again and again until they overwhelmed exhausted American and Filipino forces.

The latest communique which reported the second enemy breakthrough on Guadalcanal also disclosed that the American forces still were a match for the Nipponese despite lack of sleep and reported shelling and bombing attacks during the past few weeks.

"During the late afternoon (Oct. 27) an enemy assault on our positions succeeded in piercing our lines," the communique said. "Army and marine corps troops successfully counter-attacked and our original positions were regained. Two additional enemy thrusts were repulsed."

It was obvious, however, that the American troops could not fight off such attacks indefinitely unless supplies and reinforcements arrived. Recent reports indicated that Nipponese

Exchange Club Hears About Uses of Plexiglas

The Bristol Exchange Club met last evening in the Elks' Home. President Russell W. De Long presided.

In a communication from the National Exchange Club the death of Charles A. Berkey, founder and first national president of Exchange, was announced. At the next meeting of the club an appropriate memorial service will be held.

President DeLong introduced Elbert Carter, of the Rohm & Haas Co., who spoke briefly of the work of fabrication of Plexiglas and its many uses in industry and national defense. He showed a film entitled "Plexiglas" which fully covered the methods of fabrication of the plastic. At the conclusion of the film Mr. Carter answered numerous questions asked by his interested audience. Mr. Carter surprised his audience when he announced that he had another film to show them, the Navy Department's "Battle of Midway."

HULMEVIL!

A group of 53 people attended the masquerade party in the social hall of Neshameny Methodist Church, last evening. Prizes for costumes were presented as follows: Most original, Ruth Ann Hart; most comical, Miss Nellie E. Main; best dressed, Joan Meyer and Joan Saenz. Games were arranged for the adults and children, with prizes offered the winners. The committee of members of the Ladies' Aid Society in charge included: Mrs. Joseph Everitt, Mrs. Hugh B. Webster, Mrs. E. D. Adler, Mrs. Harry Claus, Mrs. John Browning, and the president of the aid, Mrs. Samuel K. Faust. Refreshments of sweet cider, ginger cookies, apple, and lollipops were served.

Following a few days' visit in Bethlehem, and also at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. Oscar Harrison, here, William K. Harrison, Jr., returned to Queens town, Md., on Monday.

Pearl S. Buck Accepts Xmas Seal Chairmanship

Pearl S. Buck, world-famed author and Nobel Prize winner, whose home is near Dublin, will be chairman of the 1942 Christmas Seal sponsoring committee, according to an announcement made today by the Bucks County Tuberculosis and Health Society. The other members of this county-wide group will be announced in the near future.

"Such co-operation evidences the widespread interest in the work of our Society," said Leigh Mitchell Hodges, president of the organization. "Our need to raise $12,000 for next year's intensified attack on this disease which always flares up in wartime is meeting with earnest support in all sections. Through the Seal sale will not start until near Thanksgiving, already several purchases of Christmas Seal Health Bonds have been made by persons who share the Government's evaluation of health as our first defense."

MORE WARDENS NEEDED, MORRISVILLE SECTOR

Suggest That Women Aid In This Vital Work; For Daytime Duty

CONTINUES COURSES

MORRISVILLE, Oct. 30.—A plea is made in Morrisville sector for air raid wardens, it being suggested that women assist in this work.

Sector wardens of the Morrisville Zone, which includes Upper and Lower Falls and part of Lower Makefield Townships met with Chief Warden George Duke recently at the new control centre, which is located in the basement of the contributionship building, Morrisville.

It was decided to continue the basic training course for those wardens who had not completed their training. Section one, covering the duties of the warden will be given on Tuesday night and the second section, dealing with bombs and gas on Thursday night. The course will be in charge of Deputy Chief Warden John F. Lumsden.

It has been decided to hold all sector warden meetings at the control centre at the call of the chief warden. A meeting will be called in the very near future of all women interested in warden work as it will be necessary to

Mrs. Joseph T. Stradling Dies at Pennington, N. J.

Mrs. Ida Mancill Stradling, wife of Dr. Joseph T. Stradling, died last evening at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Dallas Johnston, Pennington, N. J.

In the 84th year of her age, Mrs. Stradling had been ill for the past 10 days. Death was caused by hardening of the arteries.

She had resided for most of her lifetime in Bristol and Edgely. Approximately one month ago she and her husband took up residence in Pennington with the Johnstons. Dr. Stradling had until recently practiced dentistry here, having been engaged in that profession for more than 60 years.

Mrs. Stradling was a member of Bristol Methodist Church. She is survived by her husband; two daughters, Mrs. Johnston, of Pennington; and Mrs. Joseph F. Lamorelle, 2d, of Philadelphia; also by five grandchildren.

The Rev. W. E. Preston Haas, pastor, will officiate at the service in Bristol Methodist Church, on Monday at two p. m. Friends may call at the church between the hours of one and two. Burial will take place in Bristol Cemetery.

Report of State Ass'n Is Presented To Realtors

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 30.—Members of Bucks County Real Estate Board, meeting in dinner session at the Fountain House, last evening, heard reports from members of the board who attended the War Conference of the Penna. Real Estate Association held at Harrisburg on October 14th, 15th, 16th. Six members of the county board attended, with President Charles H. Heyer serving as a member of the State nominating committee; Thomas B. Stockham as chairman of the State resolutions committee; and William A. Rossiter, Jr., the county secretary, as a member of the resolutions committee.

The group reporting on the conference told of rent control and other matters affecting real estate business and property owners. Mr. Stockham was re-elected vice-president of the Pa. Real Estate Association for District 2, it was announced.

With Mr. Heyer receiving last evening, members discussed matters of interest to the realtors, staging an open forum.

A nominating committee was named, with A. Paul Townsend, Langhorne, as chairman. This committee will nominate officers for the coming year, with election being held in November.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

If Mr. Dewey Wins

Washington, Oct. 29. IF, as forecast, Mr. Thomas Dewey is elected Governor of New York next Tuesday, the national political scenery will undergo a considerable change. Certainly, the repercussions of a Dewey victory will be felt in both parties. A new field of speculation will be opened up. For no one doubts that if he becomes New York's Governor, Mr. Dewey again will be an active aspirant for the Republican Presidential nomination. Last week Mr. Farley charged that he already was one—that he is now running for Governor and President at the same time. Which, however strongly it may be denied, is the fact.

SOME TIME ago Mr. Dewey did express the intention, if elected, of serving out his full term of Governor. But no one took that seriously. Promises such as that have been made before and almost always are broken. It is an unpleasant commentary on American public life, but the people have shown that they do not expect a man to keep such promises, and do not resent it when he fails to do so. That Mr. Dewey will live up to his words on this subject is a notion in which no one really takes stock.

IT IS not a question of whether he will go after the 1944 nomination; it is merely a question of what method he will use—whether he will arrange to be "drafted" as was Mr. Roosevelt in 1940, or whether, just ignoring his previous utterances, he drives straight for his goal. That he can do the latter with impunity, there is slight reason to doubt. Moreover, should he win his present fight, Mr. Dewey will be in a much stronger position to land the nomination than he was in 1940. Then he had just been beaten for the Governorship, and being beaten is distinctly not a political asset no matter how close the result. This time, if things go his way, Mr. Dewey will have the prestige of having been the first Republican to carry New York State since 1928—a matter of fourteen years.

SUPPORTING SENATOR JAMES

The following letter signed by friends of Senator Howard I. James has been mailed to voters in this area:

Bristol, Pa.,
October 28, 1942.

To our Neighbors:

A very unusual situation has developed which justifies our addressing you. Our country is at war. The vast industrial and economic resources of Pennsylvania are being drawn upon to a far greater extent than in any other State in the Union for the successful prosecution of this war.

Under our representative form of government upon the type of men directing our public affairs at Harrisburg depends the effectiveness of this war production. Four years ago the Republicans of Bucks County elected to the State Senate Howard I. James, Esq., who, during his term of service, has intelligently and effectively co-operated with Governor James in building up the vast war defense program now in operation in Pennsylvania. In every other line of his public activity at Harrisburg he has exhibited a patriotic and courageous understanding of Bucks County's interests by his work in committees and votes on the floor of the Senate.

The unusual situation to which we refer is that recently a citizen of Doylestown, bearing the name of James, has taken up temporary residence in our midst and engaged in a house to house canvass for the purpose of soliciting votes from Republicans to elect himself to the State Senate.

We would call your attention to the fact this individual is without public experience of any character and has never held a public office. Nothing in his business experience would justify him asking Republicans to support him for the highly important office of State Senator at a time when every public consideration requires Republicans to support for public office men of experience, intellectual courage and proven ability in the field of public work to which they aspire.

May we recite to you some of the reasons why Republicans of Bucks County should support Senator James? He has been a resident of Bristol for many years, in fact all of his adult life. He has been outstanding in his profession of law, ranking with the leaders of that profession in Bucks County.

His practice has brought him in contact with thousands of our citizens whom he has served with intelligence and a high regard for legal ethics. He was one of the organizers of the Bristol Trust Company and has served continuously as a director, solicitor and trust officer since its organization, assisting in the care of millions of dollars of the funds of the people of this district. He is and has been one of the directing heads of seven Building and Loan Associations, again aiding in the savings and home buying functions of these institutions. He has been associated with many of the fraternal organizations of Bristol and taken an active part in the direction of their charitable and administrative activities. He is the legal representative of our School Board, our Borough Council—in fact of the School Boards, Supervisors and Borough Councils of most of the political subdivisions in the Bristol area.

There is hardly any patriotic or worthwhile enterprise in the life of the lower end of Bucks County in the past forty years in which he has not been called upon to take an active part.

We know of no one who can match this record of service both official and personal. For these reasons we, his neighbors, ask that you give him your vote. The most convenient way to do this is by voting the Straight Republican ticket on November the third next by

ANNOUNCE VACANCIES AT VOCATIONAL SCHOOL

In Night Classes for Machine Shop, Shop Sketching, Electric Welding

SOME IN DAY CLASSES

It is announced by Frank Meyer, director of Bristol Vocational School, that a few vacancies exist in the following night classes: Machine shop, shop sketching and electric welding. Classes are held Monday and Wednesday evenings and Tuesday and Thursday evenings. There is also a course in aircraft pattern making which is held on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. All the above classes are held from seven to 10 p. m.

There are also vacancies in the day electric welding class. This class is held five days a week, Monday through Friday from eight a. m. to 4:30 p. m. People who are not employed in defense plants and who are working "shift work," can arrange to take this training for four hours during the day.

More and more electric welders are needed to make the ships, planes and tanks required to attain victory. Upon completion of the course, contact will be made with defense plants for placement.

Anyone interested in any of the above classes may call at the Bristol Vocational School, 305 Wood street, or phone Bristol 2502 any day or evening from eight a. m. to 10 p. m., Monday through Thursday.

IN 1938

Mary, an American who, seventy years of age in 1934 will be able to say: "I went into the Second World War when I was eighteen and fought it through. It was a different world then."

There is no question that the world will then seem different. The most convincing proof of that is what has happened in the last fifty years.

It would be vain to speculate on what the world will be like at the end of the present century. How vain it would be to see when one looks back to 1892 and remember how little humanity guessed what was in store for it.

Fifty years ago the telephone had been invented, but no one at that time envisaged the enormous expansion the convenience has shown since. The electric light was here, but no one foresaw its present universality. The automobile was still to be started on its way, and no one realized that mechanical locomotion on a gigantic scale was near at hand. The airplane was still a dream and man did not suspect that aviation would come so soon and so sweepingly. Radio was unthought of.

Fifty years hence as many and as amazing new developments will have occurred. They may not be mechanical in nature. Those who attempt to predict the future lean more strongly to the theory that they will be chemical. But predictions of things to come may fall a mile of the mark as did those fifty years ago. The only safe prediction is that new inventions will change the world.

CHANGES IN DIXIE

Some observers of trends profess to believe that the cotton economy of the South is about to be supplanted by industry. The war, they say, is industrializing the South, and bringing about agricultural change as well.

Dixie is being dotted with hundreds of large chemical installations, munitions plants, petroleum refineries, synthetic rubber factories, magnesium and aluminum mills, paper mills and steel forges, copper mills and plastic plants. There has been a great migration of labor from the cotton fields.

Workers in industrial plants are paid from $10 to $12 a day. The average cotton farmer's income has been probably $25 per month. Cotton labor is going after the big money.

"Excess" taxes, it seems, are those you thought two or three years ago, but those labor union officials can live now with government o. k.

ARE YOUR WIRING CIRCUITS OVERLOADED?

You can't pour three pints of water into a one-quart bottle. Neither can you use more wattage than an electric circuit will carry. When you overload your home circuits, lights dim . . . heating appliances "heat up" slowly . . . and fuses blow.

Avoid private blackouts from blown fuses and enjoy better electric service by making your own home wiring survey.

Turn on lights and lamps in every part of the house, including halls, closets, porches, garages, etc. Starting with circuit No. 1, loosen the fuse. Those areas where the lights go out are on this circuit. Check each circuit in your home the same way. Then make a list or diagram showing the number of watts on each circuit. Unless your home has special wiring, this should not exceed 1,750. (The proper size fuse on ordinary circuits is 15 amperes.) Also check the wattage of appliances before connecting. Too many on one circuit often causes blowouts.

GIRL IN THE GREEN COAT by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

We slept until noon and I felt better than I had for a week when I woke, really refreshed after nearly eight hours' sleep.

It was a good thing, too, for no sooner had I had my coffee and picked up the Sunday paper, than my eye lit on the news that a pawnbroker—Mr. Skelton had identified the gun that killed Gilbert Castle as one that he sold to P. J. Raymond, on the second of November, 1923.

Of course it had to happen on Sunday. It couldn't have been on a Saturday or a Monday, so an afternoon paper could get a break!

Well, it looked as though Inspector Hare was right about Pete Raymond. "When I get the motive, I'm all set," he said.

A man named Weaver, who worked for a wholesale candy concern, came forward now, and said that one day, toward the end of January, while he was waiting for Raymond to give him an order for candy bars, he overheard him talking to a short, bald man whom he now recognized to be Howell, and heard Raymond say, "I don't care how much drag he has, Castle is going to keep his nose out of my business, or else—"

Hare was working on the theory that Gil Castle was involved with Pete in some way, possibly even a silent partner in one of his gambling rackets. It was true that Gil followed the races and bet rather heavily at times. Some of his quarrels with his mother were over his losses, Chris admitted to me privately, but neither of us could get to Mrs. Castle to verify the story. She would see no one.

Josh Beane, our city editor, had me nearly wild, calling the Castle house, trying to get to her. He saw the whole story folding on him with everything pointing to Raymond, and of course he blamed it all on me.

"See Mrs. Castle," he kept telling me, "get her to say that Gil's alleged gambling losses weren't gambling losses at all—just an excuse for getting dough for one of his dames. Stands to reason—that dotting old girl wouldn't have refused her kid money to play the ponies. She didn't care how many horses he lost on; it was how many women he was keeping that got her! You know her! Get it out of her. And get another interview with the Raymond woman. Do you realize a fine national story is petering into a two-bit local murder just because there isn't a smart reporter to keep it going! DO something. I give you enough tips. If you're going to let that nitwit Hare pin it on a stiff, Pete's sake make a story of it. Fingerprints on the gun MIGHT be Raymond's. Raymond purchased a thirty calibre pistol in a Stockton hockshop in 1923. Phooey! Bah, bah, black-sheep! When I think what a good reporter could do with this natural. Get a woman into it. Get Raymond's wife into it if you can't do any better. Keep it ALIVE!"

I started dialing the Castle's house again.

Josh came over to me, a new light in his eyes. "Listen," he said, "I've got something. Castle wasn't the only one who played the ponies, it was this Express guy, Hall, too. I've got a hunch he was mixed up with either Castle or Raymond, or maybe both in this racket. He didn't just happen to arrive in town on the day somebody bumped Castle off. Castle sent for him, and they were up to something together. Too bad Raymond didn't live long enough to talk. For all I know he might have been after Hall and got Castle instead. Work on Hall—find out all you can about his past and I'll go on with my checking too."

Had Josh only known it, it wasn't finding out more about Chris Hall's past that was worrying me, it was keeping the little I did know from Josh.

Time and time again I wished that Chris hadn't told me what he did.

I had nightmares when I dreamed that he was the murderer and I was shielding him. Maybe, as my grandmother used to say, he had thrown a sprat to catch a mackerel. Maybe he never saw any girl in a green coat. Maybe that was just his plan to trap me, so that I couldn't tell what I knew about him, without his telling what might very easily seem true about me.

And I didn't fool myself about Chris Hall. I knew by the look in his eye when he told me. He wasn't fooling me and he wasn't bluffing. If I broke down and told Josh or told Hare the story he told me about being asleep in Jan's studio that night it all happened, he'd drag me right in by the hair and say that he saw me come in after it was all over, and step over the body, and take something off the piano.

I lived in horror of saying something to give it away, for all good city editors are half psychic anyway and get hunches on stories, and Josh was hipped on his new theory that Chris Hall was mixed up in it somewhere. I didn't really think they'd throw me in jail because of it, but I knew very well that Josh would fire me in a minute, and I couldn't blame him if he did. I wasn't playing fair with my own city editor . . . but what could I do?

I know that I was cranky and irritable these days, and Peg wasn't herself, either. Not that we had words at any time—just feelings.

We used to have words often, and it didn't mean anything. I'd come home tired, and find her up to her eyes in customers and yardage and trouble because the wholesale house was three yards short of the twenty-seven they promised her for Mrs. Somebody's window, and Mrs. Somebody else was changing her mind again, switching back to dead white instead of old ivory if Miss Hudson didn't mind, and then she'd sit down in the midst of chaos, her face red, her nose shiny, and tell me that my hair was a sight and horn-rimmed glasses made me look like a college sophomore or an old-maid school-teacher, she didn't know which. Sometimes we'd be genuinely annoyed with each other, but it never lasted. There was always a good feeling, a feeling of affection and understanding underneath.

Now it was different. We didn't snap at each other, we were carefully considerate. When I found a half-finished dressing-table skirt and a bolt of ruffling on my bed I carried it out to the workroom and said nothing. Peg went around picking up newspapers and hats and coats after me, her mouth tight, her eyes averted.

The fact that we both used Jan as a solace didn't help much either. If Peg wasn't there when I stopped in, then she found me there when she came in. And Jan wasn't in the studio nearly so much as he used to be. Instead of staying to practice or play when his lessons were over, he hurried off to his hotel. Chris Hall was sharing the hotel room with him and I suppose that it was company for Jan, and Chris made no secret of who was paying the bill. All in all it was a miserable per-brated his 95th birthday anniversary, has been confined to his home the past few weeks as the result of injuries received in a fall. With his feet dangling over the edge of his bed, he proudly displayed his "hen fruit," and stated that during his long span of life he has had much experience with poultry, but he claims he never saw anything in the way of chicken eggs to match the pair of "whoppers" he held in a strawberry box.

The owner of the hen insisted that the eggs be exhibited at the borough's "corner store," where, in a conspicuous place in a candy case, they are creating much interest and are the cause of considerable discussion. Commission merchants and other authorities on poultry and eggs declare the eggs exceed duck eggs in size, and they can hardly believe a hen did such an exceptional "job."

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 30—Miss Erma Linsenmaier, South Main street, has been accepted by the WAVES. She is the second young woman from the county seat to enlist in the Women's Naval Reserve.

After passing her physical and mental examinations, Miss Linsenmaier was sworn in as an apprentice seaman. She expects to leave either December 19th or 12th for a school in Oklahoma, where she will undergo three months of training. At the end of that time she will be a yeoman, which means that she will be doing office work.

Miss Linsenmaier, who is 24 and a graduate of Buckingham high school, is employed by the Bucks County Board of Assistance.

Her brother, Richard Linsenmaier, has been in the Navy since March. He is a seaman second class and is stationed at Horsham.

enroll women for this important work to do day-time duty. Women who are interested in becoming wardens are invited to take the instruction class called for this week.

Warden Duke told the group that it would be necessary to have all certified wardens sworn in and he planned to call wardens together by sectors for the swearing in at which time they would receive their official arm band.

The question of air raid shelters came up for lengthy discussion and it was recommended that adequate shelters be provided by the defense council and that arrows be placed so that they point towards the shelters. Robert Kirkbride, in charge of the control centre, explained to the group the functions of the control centre.

ber Hill, and one-fourth to a son, Joseph E. Hill, Jr. The will which was executed March 25, 1941, named the widow and son, Joseph E. Hill, Jr., executors. The testator, who was also known as J. E. Hill, died September 15th.

A son, Francis H. Wolfinger, was named executor of the $500 personal and $3500 real estate of Elmer H. Wolfinger, Perkashie. The estate is to be distributed equally among three children, Francis H. Wolfinger, Annie Vargo and Florence Hager. The will was written September 26th and the testator died October 9th.

The $100 personal and $3500 real estate of Nathaniel H. Benner, Hilltown township, will be distributed as follows: One-ninth each to Martha H., Henry H., Abram H., and Allen H. Benner, Maggie H., Bishop and Elizabeth H. Hendricks, children, one-ninth to the children of a deceased son, Nathaniel H. Benner, and the remaining ninth to the Union National Bank and Trust Company, Souderton, in trust for a son, Warren H. Benner.

Charles H. Benner was named executor by his father, who died October 11. Frank Fluck was named executor in the will of Senilla Fluck, Milford township, which was made January 11, 1929. She left $200 in trust to the Cemetery Committee of the St. John's Lutheran Church, Spinnerstown. The remainder of the $1826.48 personal estate was left to the church itself.

mothers of today. The hard necessities of war are bringing millions of American women into war work and auxiliary services, to replace men who have been called to the colors.

"We all know the brave effort they are making. We all know they are doing far more than placing a service star in the window. They are fighting not only to keep farms and business places in operation, but also to preserve and maintain the home as a place for their loved ones when they return from the war. And, in addition to all this, they are taking up the burdens of clean politics and good citizenship. They are doing a magnificent job, and to them I pledge all the help and cooperation of my administration."

Scholl, Perkashie, who died September 28th, named the Quakertown Trust Company executor of her will which was made April 29, 1933. The $300 personal estate will be inherited by Quakertown Trust Company in trust for the person or institution taking care of the testatrix in her last days.

Letters of administration in the estate of Fannie R. McKnight, Bedminster township, were granted to her husband, Stanley R. McKnight, Sr., amounting to $1200, the accrued income under the trust fund of her father. The heirs are her husband, two sons, Stanley R. McKnight, Jr., and Harry McKnight, and two daughters, Mary Elizabeth Thompson and Marian Preston.

In the estate of J. Roland Tomlinson, Newtown, letters of administration were granted to the First National Bank and Trust Company, Newtown. His widow, Kate M. Tomlinson, and a son, Howard O. Tomlinson, both of Newtown, are the heirs to his $3000 personal estate and an unimproved lot on East Centre avenue, Newtown.

"The war has created and will create more problems when it is ended. Just as the Negro problem was tremendous at one time, so will other problems develop of just as great a magnitude. The problem of India is one of these major conflicts now. Our hearts are with India, but our heads are with Great Britain. It is a very debatable issue."

Discussing the return of some of our fighting men from Corregidor the speaker declared that the first reaction of these men is that we at home have done practically nothing to further the winning of the war. These men lived on rice for three straight weeks. And when they came back they listened to the radios and heard advertisements of all kinds of foods and delicacies. Japanese Ground Forces Attempt To Wear Down Marines On Guadalcanal warships dominate the waters around Guadalcanal.

There were no further reports of action at sea since the week-end naval battle northeast of Guadalcanal. The final outcome of this engagement may determine whether the outnumbered U. S. Pacific fleet units could supply the Guadalcanal garrison.

On Guadalcanal the Japanese forces held one advantage—they could scatter through the mountains and jungle to rest after strong attacks, leaving smaller units to harass the American lines.

Meanwhile, U. S. Army and Marine Corps forces were pinned to the Henderson Field area where they were required to remain constantly on the alert against ground assaults on three sides as well as naval and aerial bombardments.

War analysts asserted however, that the American position on Guadalcanal would not become desperate until their air field was knocked out or their planes were unable to take to the skies because of damage, destruction or lack of gas.

Navy Day

this Commonwealth has played in forging our great Weapon of Freedom.

"For it was in Pennsylvania, we recall, that the Continental Congress founded the American Navy. From Pennsylvania came John Barry, still honored as the 'Father of the Navy.' In the shipyards of this State have been constructed many of the proudest vessels of our Navy, from the earliest days of our history until including the present world crisis. And aboard these ships have served, in every war, as they serve today, thousands of Pennsylvanians.

"Pygmalion" To Be Staged At Bucks County Playhouse

The Bucks County Playhouse will open its fall season in the ballroom-theatre of the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel on Tuesday evening, November 10, with the stage and screen star Sylvia Sydney appearing in George Bernard Shaw's famous comedy "Pygmalion."

The fall season, inaugurated as a result of the popularity of the plays presented last summer, will be limited to five weeks. The Playhouse will again be under the direction of Theron Bamberger and will maintain its policy of presenting high class Broadway plays at reasonable prices. The box office, in the hotel lobby, will open next Tuesday.

Miss Sydney, Broadway star who achieved success in her first appearance on the stage when she was little more than a child, returned from Hollywood several years ago after a protracted period of stardom on the screen. In the last few months she has played the stellar role in "Pygmalion" in a number of cities to large audiences.

Today's Quiet Moment

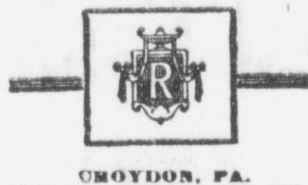

(By the Rev. James R. Galley)
Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church

We praise thee, O God, our Father, for the grace and mercy which thou dost bestow upon both the just and the unjust. Surely thou art a loving God! May we not permit our vision of thee to be discolored by the misfortunes of life; but kindle within our hearts a faith which is not dependent upon the attainment of personal desires, nor the satisfaction of individual needs. Enable us to learn from the example of Christ that faith can be intensified by trial to the glory of God and for the advancement of His Kingdom. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Faith Clarke's SHOPPING TIPS FOR BUDGETEERS

SNUGGIE PAJAMAS for women or girls are warm enough without being bulky. The department won't know them by that name, but just ask for the cotton knitwear ski-fashion pajamas for women, those with the alternating rib design, at $1.59 a pair. Closely knit ankles and cuffs, pretty, high necks—coral and blue. Small, medium and large. Extra sizes, $1.89. Similar nighties, too, if you like 'em. All cozy! 1st fl. Knit Underwear Dept., Snellenburgs.

SNAP 'EM UP—The right kind of Christmas gifts—as you find them. Some of the loveliest gifts to arrive from another country—gifts for Xmas, weddings, birthdays, etc.—are those of real and colorful onyx, hand-carved in Mexico. Never have I been more intrigued. These beautiful pieces range in price from $1 decorative animals to $13.50 book-ends in cream and saffron. I think I like as well as any the amazingly life-sized baby turtles which men will like for paper-weights. I was sure these would cost $5 each—and they are but $1.50! Other pieces in green, gray, rose, etc. The Snellenburg 1st fl. Gift Dept.

A WINTER HINT. You can make a winter coat warmer and a fall or spring coat seasonable by quickly tacking in a removable lining.

These linings come at different prices, $3.95 to $7.75. They can almost make a new coat out of an old one and literally do turn a light-weight one into a warm one. These well-made linings come sleeveless and sleeved. A $3.95 quilted one has a wool filling. However, there are other good types, several desirable shades. Sizes 12 to 42. Snellenburgs. 2nd fl. Coat Dept.

TO YOUR HEALTH! If you work hard, be good to yourself. Go on the defensive against that excessive fatigue which lowers vitality, takes the joy—and the efficiency—out of life. It is amazing what the health-control light-weight health belts at the Snellenburg Store can do. I know—I have one. Light as a feather, so washable, these belts help posture, improve figures, hold organs in place. Priced at only $2 and $3. Have the health expert, Miss Nossek, fit you quickly, without disrobing. Tell her I said so. She's near the 1st fl. Notions Dept. Ask to see her light health shoulder braces, at $1 each, for children, women, even men! Be wise.

P.S. Remember, Duration Christmas shopping should begin early. Plenty of swell, practical gifts in all departments of shops now!

Faithfully, FAITH.

EASY TO FIND even in a blackout are the houses and driveways numbered or named—depending whether you live in the city or country—in little reflecting jewels of glass. These are designed on the same principle of official reflecting highway signs, and are as efficient. Besides, they are artistic night and day. Separately, each 2 1/2" letter costs 75c; an artistic wood panel costs 75c; a ground stake, if necessary, 75c additional. However, panels and letters together, already applied, do cost less, so that a panel with one letter is priced at only $1.30, with two, $2.05, while ten letters on a panel will cost $8.85. But send or ask for a folder or see the nice things. They add character to a place! Housewares Dept., 3rd fl., Snellenburgs.

NYLON FLEECE COATS! Isn't that something? They have the swank of the camel's hair polo coat of yesterday, but are streamlined to today.

Females are going quite mad about them. These new coats have several qualities. The fleece does not wear off. The more it is brushed, the better it looks; it is more cleanable than wool; it is more warm in bad weather. A cotton back acts as an insulator against cold, and keeps in body heat. The designers claim truly that these beautiful coats were "born in a test tube." Red, blue, green, natural. Sizes 12 to 20. For all ages! 2nd fl. Coat Dept.

MEN'S "SKI" PAJAMAS! These will make hoop-la gifts for men at home or in the armed forces. They're the best-looking things—not at all bedroom-like. The Snellenburg Men's Furnishings Dept. has a particularly nice group of them at $2.45, tailored by one of our most persnickety manufacturers. Their soft cotton needs no ironing. Buttonless, snug wrists. Sizes A, B, C and D. Military tan, green, and blue. Grand Xmas gifts! 1st fl.

ANOTHER MIRACLE, a streamline one, is a water-mixed paint with no odor, one which can be rolled on or brushed on. It covers old wallpaper, painted walls, plywood walls, wallboard, fireplaces, brick interiors, basement walls, and dries in one hour. $2.98 per gal., 98c per qt. Concentrated paste form. Ivory, cream, off-white, pebble gray, buff, apple, jonquil, peach, avon blue. Anyone can do it. Wonderful! See it demonstrated. Snellenburg Housewares Dept., 3rd fl.

BRISTOL HIGH XI WILL HAVE CHANCE TO INCREASE LEAGUE LEAD WHEN IT MEETS LANGHORNE ELEVEN TOMORROW

Bristol high school will have a chance to increase its lead in the Lower Bucks County Football League tomorrow afternoon when it meets Coach "Charlie" Beck's Langhorne high school eleven on the local field.

In its only Lower Bucks tilt played Bristol defeated Bensalem, which incidentally was the only Bristol triumph of the season. The game with Morrisville, last week, was a non-league tilt and thus if Bristol defeats Langhorne it will be on top of the heap. In another Lower Bucks classic, Bensalem meets Morrisville. If the Owls can win over the Bulldogs, then the worst Bristol can get out of the league is a tie, that is, if the Bunnies triumph over Langhorne.

Although it hasn't scored a point in its last three games, Coach Bartholomew has unshaken confidence in his team. He knows that the club has football ability but the line and the backfield is not co-ordinating the way it should.

"In both the Riverside and Morrisville games the line seemed to click when the backfield was at its worst and when the backfield seemed up to par, there was no holes in the line, spoiling the entire offensive power," stated the Bristol mentor in talking of his team's chances with Langhorne.

"I know the boys can play, even if it is a green team and it is only a matter of time when the boys will be clicking and starting to take over the opposing teams."

Coach Bartholomew has appointed Sammy Spadafora who plays the left guard position captain for the Langhorne contest. Spadafora played well against the Morrisville team and held up his position in the rain against Riverside.

Although he is not expected to start, Mayo Scancelli is expected to see action in the game. Scancelli missed the last three games because of a tonsillectomy. He worked out with the team this week and unless complications arise will be in uniform.

Coach Bartholomew is also confronted with the problem of developing a substitute fullback, one of his problems all season. At first, big Paul Ruby was at this position. When Ruby was injured "Mike" Hajducek was promoted to the regular job with Lomma being used as an alternate. Now Lomma will not be available for the Langhorne game and the Bunnies' mentor is grooming Angelo Cordisco for the substitute fullback job. Cordisco has been used at one of the end positions.

At first, Coach Bartholomew was planning to shift "Kenny" Maag from the left wing position to fullback but this would weaken the end post as Maag has been doing wonderful work at his position and so Cordisco was picked for the job.

Crossan, Riebel, Camillucci, Iannucci, Simons, Johnson, Miller Hajducek, and Messanelli will make up the remainder of the lineup.

Coach Beck's Langhorne Redskins defeated Upper Moreland last week and previously to that had held the strong George School to a 6-6 deadlock. Langhorne's backfield of Clark, Knox, Spattacini, and Flannery, is enough trouble for any school team, while the line is composed of: Nicklow, Carter, Lukens, Salvatore, Walsh, Hammond, and Miller.

This will be Bristol's second home game of the season. Next week, the eleven travels to Burlington to play Coach Al Rundle's boys and the following Saturday the team is home again to play the Pennsylvania School for Deaf.

EVERY politician will agree that that will put him in a very preferred position, indeed. It will insure a solid delegation from his own State and, without further effort, make him the leading candidate. Certainly, it will give him an advantage over Mr. Willkie, who will have had no victory to attest his political strength since his 1940 defeat. In addition, while Mr. Willkie has done a pretty fine thing in putting aside his personal dislike for the man and supporting the President's war policies, long before Pearl Harbor and since, he has not endeared himself to Republican political leaders in any section.

ON THE contrary, he has considerably more party enemies today than he has ever had. Nor has he identified himself, as he might have done, with effective opposition to the Administration incompetency and mismanagement of the war effort. Considering all these things and knowing that Mr. Willkie, like Mr. Dewey, still itches for the Presidency, it seems clear that if he wins next week, Mr. Dewey will be in the stronger position. This, for entirely sound reasons, will distress a good many people, but, nevertheless, it is the situation. Incidentally,

Mr. Willkie has not yet endorsed Mr. Dewey's gubernatorial candidacy, and it is easy to understand that Mr. Dewey would prefer to win without any Willkie help.

IT LOOKS now as if he were going to do exactly that. The fact is that Mr. Willkie seems to have put his endorsement off so long that it is hardly worth anything now—not even as much as the President's delayed and colorless statements for Mr. Bennett. Of course, despite polls and betting odds, Mr. Dewey may not win and then he would go down the drain politically, and Mr. Willkie be left in much better shape. However, opinion inclines strongly to a Dewey success. In that event two erroneous deductions may be—probably will be—drawn. One is that Dewey's election would be a repudiation of the President by the voters of his own State. That is ridiculous. As a matter of fact, if Dewey wins, it will be at least partially due to Mr. Roosevelt's pre-convention effort to take away party control from Mr. Farley and the way in which he managed to disparage Mr. Farley's candidate, Mr. Bennett, before his nomination. The other erroneous deduction would be that the defeat of his candidate would "liquidate" Mr. Farley as a political leader. That would not be the case. Mr. Farley might not be the dominant national leader a Bennett victory would make him, but he would still be State chairman and he would still have control of the State organization.

AS THINGS appear today Mr. Farley and Mr. Bennett are fighting on the defensive, with the odds against them. But it does not do to count "Big Jim" out until the last bell rings. He yet may pull his ticket through, and that would come close to making him the dominant figure in the 1944 Democratic convention. It then would be difficult, if not impossible, for Mr. Roosevelt either again to "draft" himself or to nominate Mr. Wallace. Considering these things, the national significance of the New York election can hardly be exaggerated.
